Is SRAS A Curriculum?

No. SRAS is a credential. SRAS offers proficiency on the SRA model. It provides a foundation for any curriculum as it sets a standard of excellence for the field.

Certification Topics Include:

- Defining the SRA approach
- The theoretical and public health basis for SRA
- Content of successful SRA programs
- Building parent-child connectedness
- Building community & school partnerships
- The importance of research & program evaluation
- Implementing an evidence-based approach
- Sexual health data, research, trends, & medical accuracy
- Effective public messaging
- Applying an SRA code of ethics to your program

A One-Day Messaging and Communication Practicum

Talking about sex education to students, parents, teachers, community stakeholders or the media can be challenging. The complexity and sensitive nature of the topic requires thoughtful messaging and practice if we are to clearly communicate the content and context of the SRA optimal health approach. This daylong practicum will provide individual and group activities to give participants hands-on experience developing effective communication strategies through role-play, audience feedback and critique, crafting and presenting talking points, doing interviews and developing communication policies for your organization. You will have fun while enhancing your professionalism and confidence in communicating clear and compelling information about SRA education.

See second page of flyer for training details

Pre-course reading is required. There are 9 modules with quizzes that must be completed prior to the training. Please allow 25-40 hours to complete the pre-coursework. Once you register, you will receive further instructions and details.

Observers do not need to complete the pre-coursework or submit a letter of commendation!
